Ceramiche Refin
Stand B32, B33, C37, hall 36

Ceramiche Refin will be continuing its recent collaboration with designers Massimiliano Adami and Luca Nichetto, which was viewed for the first time at Salone del Mobile this year.

Adami's ceramic project brings back the handcraft and artistic values of ceramics. His intervention on the tile's geometry refers to the organic and ever-changing spirit of the matter, and the crack on the tile conveys a sense of imperfection and is a metaphor and an aesthetical symbol, to testify the passing of time and the traces it leaves on its way.

Meanwhile, Luca Nichetto's collection offers a three-dimensional texture effect, with decorations subsequently applied on the tile to create a unique, graphical tile.

Tagina Ceramiche d'Arte
Stand A24-B27, hall 36

Tagina Ceramiche d'Arte will be displaying its new floor tile collection, Nuage.

The tile can be laid indifferently in vertical or in horizontal, as a frieze, as a socle, as a frame in general and is followed with a variegated offer of joints, angles, corners – useful to make any compositive solution.

Nuage, in keeping with Tagina's recent minimalist contemporary styles, offers a classic, elegant aesthetic sensibility enriched by the most recent ceramic technical innovations.

Tau Ceramica
Stand B27, hall 19

Spanish manufacturer Tau will be introducing a host of new stone-inspired ranges, as well as a new version of its popular Magma Blend tile.

Turmalini is sure to become the last word in interior design. It is a top-of-the-range porcelain tile product inspired by tourmaline stone, with a unique iridescent effect.

Meanwhile, Mendoza and Terranova are both part of the Tau Pétreo collection. The two porcelain stoneware series have been designed to offer a smooth, warm and comfortable feel.
